

Leaving the House Form YRR-P31-A

So you're a Proverbs 31 wife and you feel like you need to leave the house, eh? Okay, simply fill out and submit the following short form, and your husband will be with you in 4-6 weeks when he gets back from NEXT, T4G, and the Desiring God Conference. Also, he'd prefer that you tidy up a bit and make sure the kids are in bed before he gets home.

Are you leaving the house for church?

Y or N

(If Y, submit and have a nice trip . . . and make sure you wipe the snot off the kids' faces before you put them in the toddler room. Seriously, that's gross.)

Are you leaving the house for the Wednesday AM Mom's Bible Study?

Y or N

(If Y, submit and have a nice trip . . . but if you come home crying or offended the answer will be N next time.)

Are you leaving the house for food or other provisions for your husband?

Y or N

(If Y, submit and have a nice trip . . . a couple of frozen pizzas would be nice—the kind with the crust that rises, not the cheap stuff.)

Are you leaving to have coffee with that lippy, opinionated girl from church; the one you know I'm not crazy about you hanging out with?

Y or N

(If Y, no need to submit the form, just don't go because I can already tell you the answer is going to be N. If N, go ahead, but make sure you grab a coupon first . . . it's like highway robbery what you pay for those coffees. But enjoy yourself, seriously, I mean that.)

Do you feel like you need something from the Mall?

Y or N

(Because I've seen your closet and I can tell you right now you don't need anything from the Mall . . . which looks like a uniform depot for whores and strippers.)

I mean, really, what's so [expletive] great about leaving the house, anyway? _____

(In the space provided, explain what's so great about leaving the house.)

Don't you just feel like staying home and cleaning or doing laundry?

Y or N

Have you looked at the pile of laundry at the foot of the bed lately?

Y or N

Thank you for your submission (pun intended). Your husband will reply in 4-6 weeks.